Lionel Barrymore Here on Thursday

Lewis Stone and Phillips Holmes Also in "Looking Forward"

Two men and their families in the midst of a financial tempest that rocks a great mercantile institution form the keynote of "Looking Forward," Lionel Barrymore's newest starring picture Thursday at the Saenger theater.

Barrymore in a role said to be even more gripping than his characterization in "Grand Hotel," is seen as the old bookkeeper in a great banking department store. Dismissed because of the depression, he is regenerated by his loyal wife and in the end becomes the means of saving the tottering firm. Lewis Stone plays the million-aire store owner who is brought to the brink of ruin by an unfaithful trustee.

The effective cast includes Benita Hume, recently seen in "Clear All Wires"; Elizabeth Allan, who was brought to this country from England following her success opposite Leslie Howard in "Services for Ladies"; Phillips Holmes, Cora Sue Collins, Alice B. Francis, and a number of others. The title, "Looking Forward," was selected by special permission of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who permitted the producers to use the motto of his widely acclaimed book, after viewing the picture.

—Editorial By Alex. H. Washburn—

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S railroad program, announced today, is another proof of the sound-business formula that brains are more important than money. The railroads the last 20 years learned to lean on the government, first for regulation, and then for money. The industrial brains that built and early maintained the roads, long ago went over to automobiles and other lines—so that the government eventually found no matter how much money it advanced the roads they got steadily worse.

Now the president reverses the Hoover policy, and instead of pouring millions of dollars of R. F. C. loans down a rathole he proposes to assign a railroad dictator or "coordinator" to shake up the entire business—make it self-supporting and respectable once more.

The public, at first won over to the railroads' side by fear for its life insurance investment in railroad bonds, subsequently reversed its sympathies, frightened by the stupendous manner in which the roads were swallowing federal credit without getting any better.

XXX

This is really "face-the-facts day" for the railroads.

They have been asking for the suspension of competitive truck lines, so that they might maintain their vast, overbuilt network of steel rails; and continue to pay taxes on the same.

Now we are in for something different.

Instead of trying to tear out the automobile,page in history we are going to tear out a few railroad tracks; make truck lines serve those routes instead.

The entire railroad system is going to be squeezed down to a workable network of central roads and the more important "feeder"lines. The rest will be junked.

Railroad capital will be written down accordingly.

XXX

In this writing,down process it isn't the insurance companies that are going to be hurt.

The big insurance companies pick the choice bonds of the biggest roads. They are largely protected against any short of extermination of the railroads—which isn't going to happen.

But the people who are going to be hurt—the people who will lose a fortune—are the tax-payers.

Hempstead county receives approximately $50,000 a year in railroad taxes. If railway lines are torn up and less equipment run through this county,investment becomes less, assesments shrink, and the total tax return might conceivably drop to half $50,000.

XXX

That loss will have to be replaced with taxation in other directions.

Not a pleasant prospect.

But it gives you a quick glance at what's ahead of us.

To Discuss Trade Before War Debt

Debts Not to Enter London Economic Conference, Says Britain

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald announced in the House of Commons Thursday that Britain favors the American proposal for a tariff truce during the period of the world economic conference opening here June 12, with safeguards from Britain's special tariff position. In the matter o a question he told the Commons that the war debts would not be taken up at the world economic conference.

LONDON, Eig.—(AP)—British banks likely will contest the legality of the United States gold export action on behalf of their clients, some newspaper reports said Thursday.

The banks allege "breach of contract" continues under much criticism in financial quarters and the press.

Expect Hard Fight Over Procedure in July 18th Election

Candidates Uncertain as to Primary, Convention, or "Free-for-All"

TO DECIDE MAY 13

State Central Committee Sharply Divided Over Probable Course

LITTLE ROCK — (AP) — Confusion exists in Democratic political circles here in advance of the meeting of the democratic state central committee a week from next Saturday, May 13, to determine the procedure in selecting the party nominee for chief justice of the state supreme court.

Candidates for chief justice for the remainder of the term of the late Judge Jesse C. Hart are "at sea" as to how to map out their campaigns until they learn whether a special primary election or a state convention is to be called to select the democratic nominee, or the general election on July 18 is to be thrown open to all candidates.

Committee at Odds

The committee itself is understood to be divided sharply on the question of procedure, some favoring a special primary and some a convention, and still others desiring that the July 18th election be merely a free-for-all fight.

The action of the committee next week is expected to establish a precedent to be followed in the future.

Until last fall, it was customary for the state committee itself to nominate candidates to fill vacancies, but the last state convention changed the rules and ordered that the committee call a primary if there was sufficient time, and a convention to call a convention.

Several candidates have announced for chief justice but the opening of their ranks this week came after the action of the committee, for if the convention plan should be adopted, the candidates could confine their activities to seeking support of the convention delegates.

If the committee should decide not to arrange for nomination of a party candidate and leave the field open in the July 18th election then all Democrats could run, regardless of party affiliations or Independents. This also would be a new procedure.

Republican aspirants have given no indication they will put a candidate into the field.

The Candidates

Democratic candidates who already have announced are Chief Justice C. E. Johnson, who is now serving by appointment of the governor; Carroll D. Wood, retired justice, and W. H. Arnold, Sr., of Texarkana.

Meanwhile, there is talk now in political circles that the state committee may also have before it the question of filling a vacancy in congress since Representative Heartsill Ragon is reported to be under consideration for appointment as federal judge of the western district of Arkansas. Although no announcement is expected soon, because of the present session and Ragon's work as a member of the powerful house ways and means committee it is regarded here as doubtful that he would be appointed before the end of the congressional session.

Several prospective candidates for his seat in congress already have been mentioned, including Senator Lee Cruce Bailey of Russellville, Lieutenant Governor Earl Page, Sam Hoss of Russellville, Brooks Hays, democratic national committeeman, and Prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey of Little Rock.

Illinois Implement Manufacturer Will Be Administrator

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—George Peek of Moline, Ill., has virtually been decided upon as chief administrator of the sweeping farm-relief measure now approaching final passage by congress.

Peek, a farm equipment manufacturer, and long a student of agricultural problems, was participant in White House conferences Wednesday night on ways and means of applying the bill which is designed to raise the price of farm commodities.

Plans for putting the measure into operation were proceeding rapidly Thursday while senators and representatives sought at a conference of the two houses to reconcile the differences between the farm bills passed by the senate and the house.

Muscle Shoals Passed

WASHINGTON.—The senate Wednesday passed the final section of President Roosevelt's plan to turn Muscle Shoals into a gigantic power plant for the nation.

In passing the Norris bill, the senate virtually completed congressional action looking toward development of the Tennessee river valley. After it was approved on minor points, the legislation will be sent to the White House for Mr. Roosevelt's signature.

The vote Wednesday was 63 to 20.

Only three democrats voted against the bill. They were Senators Marvel A. Coolidge, Mass., Thomas P. Gore, Okla., and Hiram W. Tydings, Md. Forty-eight democrats, 2 republicans and Senator Henrik Shipstead, F.-L., Minn., supported the measure.

The bill authorizes the president, to co-operate with the states in surveying the Tennessee drainage basin for development. A "Tennessee valley authority" will quickly be created and will operate the Muscle Shoals power stations, nitrate developments and the proposed Cove Creek dam at the Clinch river in Tennessee.

Duluth-Arkansas Beck No. 1 Is Reported Flowing Wednesday

TEXARKANA—The Duluth-Arkansas Oil company No. 1-E. H. Beck was flowing Wednesday out of 4-inch casing, at a rate estimated by Fred Pederson, field manager, at 500 barrels daily.

The well was believed to have come in Tuesday night and flowed all day Wednesday, putting a steady two inch stream into its tanks. Preparations for a production test of several tankages were being made Wednesday.

The well is flowing from the 3716 foot level, out of 11 feet of sand.

The well was bailed 10 days ago, but bailing was abandoned, when it proved ineffectual in lowering the fluid level. Since then the well has been let pretty much alone, except for occasional bailings for the purpose of agitation. It made its first free heads after such procedure Sunday, and the oil and gas rose to within 50 to 100 feet of the top of the hole.

Louisiana Officers Say They Resisted Foreclosure Action in Field

LEMARS, Ia.—(AP)—Judge C. C. Bradley, victim of an attack by farmers who dragged him from his bench and threatened to hang him unless he ceased foreclosure proceedings, appeared Thursday before the military court which is investigating the outbreak.

The session was secret.

3 Negroes Slain

LAKE CHARLES, La.—(AP)—Three negro farmers were shot to death late Wednesday in a field in Jeff Davis parish after they allegedly attacked Sheriff John Conner and Deputy Sheriff Cole, it was learned here Tuesday.

The officers had gone to the negroes' farm with a court order demanding that they vacate in a foreclosure proceeding.

The officers said the negroes attacked them with razors, whip-handles and clubs.

Witness Describes Attack

LE MARS, Ia.—(AP)—One of three witnesses to the abduction and threatened lynching of District Judge C. C. Bradley told a military court Wednesday how he heard some of the 200 men who dragged the judge from his courtroom shout: "Get a rope. Let's hang him."

The witness said others in the mob shouted to "get a clothesline" and fastened it around the jurist's neck.

The three men told their story as the court-martial began sifting evidence against more than 100 farmers arrested in connection with last week's riots. They said they would be able to identify several members of the mob.

Authorities at the camp here said approximately 200 men were still held in the prison stockade at the station and with the storming of the bastile, only a few exceptions, Sheriff Pringnitz last Thursday during a foreclosure sale. The number in jail here was placed at 66.

Charles J. Hamiter Puts Bandits to Rout at Tampa, Fla.

Charles J. Hamiter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamiter of Patmos, who is in the grocery business at Tampa, Fla., beat off an attack by robbers in his father's store at Tampa Sunday, according to a copy of the Tampa Sunday Tribune just received in Hope.

Mr. Hamiter, 24-year-old manager of an A. & P. grocery store in Tampa, was accosted by two bandits late Saturday night and ordered to put up his hands. Instead, Hamiter drew a pistol from his shirt, and he and the bandits fired 12 times—before the latter abandoned their attempt and ran up the street. Nobody was hurt.

The robbers left in such haste that they forgot their parked roadster, which police promptly seized for positive identification.

Hoard Goods Now Instead of Money

Stampede Sets in to Buy Staples Before Prices Sky-Rocket

WASHINGTON—A new type of hoarding—the hoarding of staple foods and materials is sweeping over the country, Federal Reserve Board and Department of Commerce officials said Wednesday.

Large purchases of canned foods, staples like flour and sugar, clothing and household linens are being made all over the country in anticipation of inflationary prices, it was said. Most of these goods are not for immediate consumption but for use after prices rise.

In some respects the purchasing reflects a domestic flight from the dollar. Secretary of Commerce Roper warned Wednesday that "a growing desire to shift cash and bank deposits into equities" Elsewhere in the government it was suggested that even the increased automobile sales were a reflection of a movement to convert money into goods before the value of money is depreciated.

Roosevelt Plans to Form 3 Groups for Entire Nation

President's Program Aims at Repeal of Best Amiller Earnings

ONE-MAN CONTRO

Joseph B. Eastman Likely to Be Named Rail Co-Ordinator

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt sent congress Thursday his emergency proposal for the appointment of a federal co-ordinator to guide the railroads through a reorganization.

Congressional advocates of the legislation had framed the measure and planned to expedite it through committee to the senate and house for debate and passage.

The president asked immediate repeal of the "recapture of profits" clause in the transportation act of 1920, to remove prohibitions against federal regulation of railway holding companies.

He outlined the duties of the co-ordinator as follows:

"1. To encourage, promote and require action on the part of the carriers to avoid duplication of service.

"2. To prevent waste through ill-advised or unauthorized receiverships or financial reorganizations.

Joseph B. Eastman, member of the Interstate Commerce commission, mentioned as the most likely choice for the co-ordinator post, was confirmed on a president in war of peace," partly justified the use of the word "dictator."

"It is the common feeling in Washington," Ross said, "that Roosevelt will take us either 'way up or way down.' Something halfway will not be the wholesome prosperity, or ruin the country."

Carl R. Gray (above), president of the Union Pacific Railroad since 1920, is mentioned prominently for the position of federal moderator for railroads, contemplated in President Roosevelt's program for consolidation of the carriers. Gray, 65, began his railroad career 48 years ago as a telegraph operator and station agent. His home is in Omaha, Neb.

Joseph B. Eastman, above, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, is regarded in Washington as the likely choice of President Roosevelt as chief federal railroad co-ordinator.

Chicago's Unpaid Teachers

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Editorial Writer

"TO hell," says Gen. Charles G. Dawes, "with trouble makers."

This sentiment, which occasionally roils the mind of humbler citizens, found utterance in typical Dawesian fashion when a few thousand unpaid Chicago school teachers marched into Chicago's financial district and asked General Dawes to explain why they couldn't collect any of the $29,000,000 the city owes them in back salaries.

The booing which descended on the head of the former vice-president probably was more than a little unfair. After all, General Dawes wasn't mayor of Chicago when Chicago shenagled itself out of tax revenues. The mess isn't of his making.

But one of the penalties you have to pay for being a prominent banker—which ordinarily is a very crushing job—is that when things go very wrong people are apt to start blaming them on you; and somehow General Dawes' denunciation of trouble makers doesn't seem like the best of all possible comebacks.

For one of the perverse things about human nature is this: when a lot of intelligent and devoted people work hard on their jobs and find that the incompetence and chicanery of their rulers has deprived them of their incomes, they are very apt to become trouble makers. That is, they are apt to become abusive and indignant, and impolite to prominent bankers, and unmindful if the peace and quiet that ought to reign in a big city's financial district; and conigning them to the nether regions with snappy abruptness doesn't seem quite as good a gag as it might have a few years ago, even if it does help you to live up to your reputation for being blunt and outspoken.

The real trouble makers in Chicago, of course, aren't the unpaid school teachers; they are the politicians and financiers who got Chicago into such a mess that the school teachers can't get paid.

A few of these gentlemen have already toppled off of their pedestals. Others, however, remain securely placed. Chicago needs very much to have them all tossed out, and the indignation of her school teachers could be a very useful aid in that direction if someone would direct it properly. And the next time General Dawes gets tired of trouble makers, someone ought to point that fact out to him.

Highbrowed Eskimos

THE term "highbrow" is a pretty well established part of American speech nowadays, and everybody understands exactly what it means; it is, consequently, a bit surprising to find Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution, reporting to the American Philosophical Society that the word is really all wrong.

The height of a man's brow, says Dr. Hrdlicka, is no guage whatever of his mental powers. If it were, Eskimos would be the world's brainiest folk, as their brows average about 9 per cent higher than normal. A low, retreating brow can house a brilliant brain, and under the loftiest and most imposing of domes there can exist a complete mental vacuum.

Just what we ought to do about this isn't quite clear. "Highbrow" is too good a word to discard, even if it doesn't really mean anything. Probably we shall go right on using it—all of us, that is, except the highbrows.

What Matters So Long As We Have Prohibition?

NOW comes the news that the breweries over the country have discontinued the making of near beer. This would follow very naturally the heavy demand made upon the breweries for the 3.2 product recently legalized by Congress and by the legislatures of more than half the states.

This means that Arkansas and Mississippi must do without near beer this summer.

Neither the governor of Mississippi nor the governor of Arkansas feels that the time is proper to call the legislatures of those states into session to enact beer legislation; so it turns out that Mississippi and Arkansas will also be without real beer.

But why should anybody worry? Mississippi and Arkansas will go along making and drinking home brew. Of course, it is a violation of the law and the states and cities get no revenue out of it, but it is prohibition, and so long as we have prohibition, what else in life matters?—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Sister Mary's Kitchen

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

There's something about a souffle that captures everyone's interest and admiration. And while souffle-making seems most mysterious to the uninitiated, there's no conjuring trick about it. A few simple rules lead the way to a p rfect souffle.

The mixing of a souffle is of prime importance. Whites and yolks of eggs must be beaten separately the yolks with a rotary beater until thick and lemon colored and the whites on a platter with a wire whisk until stiff. Be sure to "fold" the whites into yolk mixture carefuly. The fluffy consistency of the finished souffle devents the breaking of the air bubbles vents the bearking of the air bubbles in the egg whites.

Long slow baking is also one of the secrets of souffle making. Forty to fifty minutes in an average baking dish should be allowed for baking at a temperature of 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

When firm to the touch or when a sharp knife inserted in the center of the souffle comes out clean, the souffle is done.

Chocolate Souffle

This dessert is distinctly "smart" and for that reason suitable for company occasions. However, it is so nourishing that it makes a splendid family dessert when vegetables have been served in place of meat.

Two tablespons butter, 2 tablespons flour, 1 cup milk, 2 squares bitter chocolate, 6 tablespoons granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons hot water, 1-8 tablespoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 4 eggs.

Melt butter and stir in flour. When perfectly blended slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook and stir until mixture boils. Melt chocolate over hot water, add sugar and hot water and stir until thick and lemon colored. Beat until cool. Add salt to whites of eggs and beat until stiff. Add vanilla to cooked mixture and fold in whites of eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake forty-five minutes in a modern oven. Serve with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with vanilla or a drop of oil of peppermint.

Fish Souffle

Fish souffle is delicious served with a creamed vegetable or Hollandaise sauce.

One cup flaked fish, 3 eggs, 1 cup soft stale bread crumbs, ½ cup cream, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Force fish through a coarse sieve or ricer. Combine cream and crumbs and cook, stirring constantly for five minutes. Add salt, pepper and parsley. Sprinkle lemon juice over fish and add to cooked crumbs. Add well beaten yolks of eggs and fold in whites beaten until stiff. Turn into a buttered dish and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Grape juice, cereal, cream, toasted codfish strips, corn muffins, milk coffee.

Luncheon: Fish souffle with creamed green beans, spring onions and radishes, toasted muffins, marmalade, milk, tea.

Dinner: Fricassee of chicken, steamed rice, French fried onions, pepper ring salad, lemon souffle, milk, coffee.

Two Philosophies

Raining! And it's cold, wet rain!
Peonies will blossom soon again!
Or if you choose: dark days like this
Are not our own ideas of bliss.
We know our spine the water chills;
Rain may be good for daffodils,
But we are subject to catarrh
And wet feet very dangerous are!
Raining! Cold bitter rain and harsh,
The lawn is almost now a marsh.
Good for roses: True enough!
But we need sun to do our stuff.
We find no keen enjoyment in
Getting ourselves soaked to the skin.
Rain may bring blossoms fair to see,
But it brings suffering to me.
Rain! And divergent points of view,
And both of them precisely true.
Rain brings blossoms and the green,
Which make the lovely summer scent;
Likewise to him who walks the street
For many days it spells defeat,
But the man praises or complains,
Grumbles or grins, some days it rains.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Black were Wednesday visitors in Texarkana

Litany services will be read on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at St. Marks Episcopal church.

The Paisley P. T. A. held a most interesting meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the Paisley school. A very helpful Bible lesson was given by Rev. Wallace R. Rogers, and a program on "Employment and the Child" was both instructive and interesting, special music was given by Luther Hollamon, Jr. Mrs. George Turner talked on different phases of the program subject, and summer plans was discussed by Mrs. Henry Taylor. This being the last meeting of the school term, the following new officers were installed by Mrs. O. A. Graves: President, Mrs. Charles Haynes; Vcie-President, Mrs. Chedester Hall; Recording secretary, Miss Mamie Briant; Corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Harrell; Treasurer, Mrs. H. O. Kyler. The meeting closed with Mrs. C. D. Lester instructing the committees. In the count of mothers, the dollar went to Mrs. Betts' room.

Mrs. C. C. Lewis and Mrs. George Wilson were Wednesday guests of Mrs. Hugh Latimer in Nashville.

J. L. Deloney of Foreman was the Wednesday night guest of Misses Marie and Nannie Purkins and other relatives.

On Wednesday afternoon at the Brookwood school, the Brookwood P. T. A. held their final meeting for the school term, with a splondid attendance and a most interesting program and the installation of the officers for the coming year, by Mrs. Rorsey McRae, as follows: President, Mrs. E. W. Dossett; Vice President, Mrs. Alfred Branan; Secretary, Mrs. James R. Henry, Jr.; Treasurer, Mrs. G. P. Cross.

The Cemetery Association will hold their May meeting Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Nora Carrigan, with Mrs. T. S. McDavitt as joint hostess.

On Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. M. Briant, the annual social meeting of the Bay View Reading club was held. Following the opening of the meeting by Miss Mamie Twitchell, second vice-president, both the president and first vice-president being absent, one of the cleverest and most amusing stunt and contest programs ever rendered in our city, was presented by Mrs. John S. Gibson, Sr., and Mrs. J. A. Henry opening with the introduction of world famous celebrities such as Billy Sunday, Will Rogers, Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, Greta Garbo, Aimee McPherson, Evangelist Crimm, Alex. Washburn, Slim Summerville and Miss Beryl Henry and many others noted in their especial line; the prize for the best impersonation went to Mrs. J. T. West who represented Billy Sunday, with Mrs. W. F. Saner impersonating Evangelist Crimm running her a close second; all were fine, but the honors went to the above two. A local paper was published and reviewed, and showed there must be a Walter Winchell, a Mark Sullivan, a Westbrook Pegler, a Fletcher Chenault, or a Robert Ripley in our midst that "were born to blush unseen, and waste their sweetness on the desert air." The reading of the local paper was followed by an animal parade, with Mrs. J. A. Henry as Ringmaster, with Miss Maggie Bell as the monkey, Miss Mamie Twitchell as the donkey and Mrs. E. E. White as the polar bear bringing forth the greatest round of applause, other of Hope's feminine dignities added much to this parade, for indeed the hands of the clock had been turned back, when there was no depression and fun and merriment reigned. A contest correctly named, "Shouting Proverbs" closed the program. During the social period, when a most attractive salad and ice course was served by Mrs. Briant and her joint hostess, Mrs. John S. Gibson Sr., the over-worked four muscles used in making a smile were allowed to seek their repose, while more solemn things were discussed. For this delightful occasion, the Briant home was aglow with a quantity of attractively arranged spring flowers, including lovely roses, syringa, red lilies and numerous varieties of smaller flowers.

A very delightful party of the spring season was given on Wednesday evening, when Mrs. A. B. Spraggins and Mrs. Earl Wolfe entertained at bridge, as special compliment to Mrs. R. L. Bush and Mrs. J. Hubert Bolton of Little Rock, at the home of Mrs. Spraggins on South Main street. Gracefully arranged spring flowers, including roses, sweet peas, springa and other garden flowers enhanced the beauty of the rooms, where bridge was played from six tables. In the score court, favors went to Mrs. S. L. Murphy, E. I. Rephan and Lex Helms. The honorees were given dainty gifts for remembrance. At the conclusion of the game, the hostesses served a most tempting plate lunch with hot coffee.

Koreans Use Rice as Gold Standard

Dr. R. M. Wilson Writes Account of His Leper Work

Over in Korea rice is the gold standard, and since the price of rice has doubled this year the natives are having their financial troubles along with the rest of the world, writes Dr. R. M. Wilson to his home folk in Columbus, this county.

Dr. Wilson, Presbyterian missionary for 20 years, and son of J. S. Wilson of Columbus, is in charge of the medical colony at Soonchun, Korea, treating lepers. Acknowledging recent gift packages from friends in the United States, he writes:

"We are glad to get old clothes, spectacles, pencils, scarfs and the like for the lepers, and bright picture cards for the Sunday school work. Don't send unless yo uthink the package is worth the postage. You must decide that.

"We are developing a big, fine farm and home for the lepers and this year gardening will be stressed. There are five special things in the treatment of leprosy and these are all found in the farm life. These five things are 1st, Good Diet which will result from the garden, rabbits, pigs, etc. 2nd Regular Habits. 3rd Good Appetite. 4th Cheer and Joy. 5th Freedom from other diseases and of course chaulmoogra oil.

"These things all fit in so well with the farm and home life this year we will push these lines of work. Of course if a leper is looking day in and day out at his old paralyzed face which looks like a flat tire or at his claw fingers he will not improve. The gardens, rabbits, chickens, pigs and busy life will bring cheer.

"The result with treatments are now very encouraging and most of the cases gotten in the earlier stages can be entirely arrested. Last year we discharged 80 such cases. The monthly expense per leper in 1931 was six yen each which wts distributed as follows: food 3.50; clothing .28; fuel, light, school and church 1.04; wages and travel .36. The yen was around fifty cents. Since January 1st rice has about doubled in price so the expense this year will be higher. Rice is the gold standard here.

"The men number 385, women 249, boys 48 and girls 55. One hundred twenty-five students study daily under nine leper teachers. Women as always make the best patients for from childhood they have worked and are benefitted by keeping busy. The girls are given preference for entrance. There were but fifteen deaths last year; 21 are blind, 92 have eye trouble. Seven hundred thirty-three take oil by injection and mouth. Two hundred fifty cannot work and 15 walk on peg legs of their own making."

Chicago's Unpaid Teachers

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Editorial Writer

"TO hell," says Gen. Charles G. Dawes, "with trouble makers."

This sentiment, which occasionally roils the mind of humbler citizens, found utterance in typical Dawesian fashion when a few thousand unpaid Chicago school teachers marched into Chicago's financial district and asked General Dawes to explain why they couldn't collect any of the $29,000,000 the city owes them in back salaries.

The booing which descended on the head of the former vice-president probably was more than a little unfair. After all, General Dawes wasn't mayor of Chicago when Chicago shenagled itself out of tax revenues. The mess isn't of his making.

But one of the penalties you have to pay for being a prominent banker—which ordinarily is a very crushing job—is that when things go very wrong people are apt to start blaming them on you; and somehow General Dawes' denunciation of trouble makers doesn't seem like the best of all possible comebacks.

For one of the perverse things about human nature is this: when a lot of intelligent and devoted people work hard on their jobs and find that the incompetence and chicanery of their rulers has deprived them of their incomes, they are very apt to become trouble makers. That is, they are apt to become abusive and indignant, and impolite to prominent bankers, and unmindful if the peace and quiet that ought to reign in a big city's financial district; and conigning them to the nether regions with snappy abruptness doesn't seem quite as good a gag as it might have a few years ago, even if it does help you to live up to your reputation for being blunt and outspoken.

The real trouble makers in Chicago, of course, aren't the unpaid school teachers; they are the politicians and financiers who got Chicago into such a mess that the school teachers can't get paid.

A few of these gentlemen have already toppled off of their pedestals. Others, however, remain securely placed. Chicago needs very much to have them all tossed out, and the indignation of her school teachers could be a very useful aid in that direction if someone would direct it properly. And the next time General Dawes gets tired of trouble makers, someone ought to point that fact out to him.

Highbrowed Eskimos

THE term "highbrow" is a pretty well established part of American speech nowadays, and everybody understands exactly what it means; it is, consequently, a bit surprising to find Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution, reporting to the American Philosophical Society that the word is really all wrong.

The height of a man's brow, says Dr. Hrdlicka, is no guage whatever of his mental powers. If it were, Eskimos would be the world's brainiest folk, as their brows average about 9 per cent higher than normal. A low, retreating brow can house a brilliant brain, and under the loftiest and most imposing of domes there can exist a complete mental vacuum.

Just what we ought to do about this isn't quite clear. "Highbrow" is too good a word to discard, even if it doesn't really mean anything. Probably we shall go right on using it—all of us, that is, except the highbrows.

What Matters So Long As We Have Prohibition?

NOW comes the news that the breweries over the country have discontinued the making of near beer. This would follow very naturally the heavy demand made upon the breweries for the 3.2 product recently legalized by Congress and by the legislatures of more than half the states.

This means that Arkansas and Mississippi must do without near beer this summer.

Neither the governor of Mississippi nor the governor of Arkansas feels that the time is proper to call the legislatures of those states into session to enact beer legislation; so it turns out that Mississippi and Arkansas will also be without real beer.

But why should anybody worry? Mississippi and Arkansas will go along making and drinking home brew. Of course, it is a violation of the law and the states and cities get no revenue out of it, but it is prohibition, and so long as we have prohibition, what else in life matters?—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

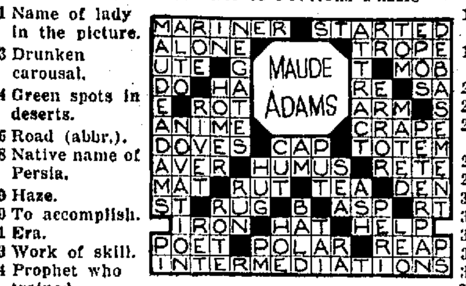
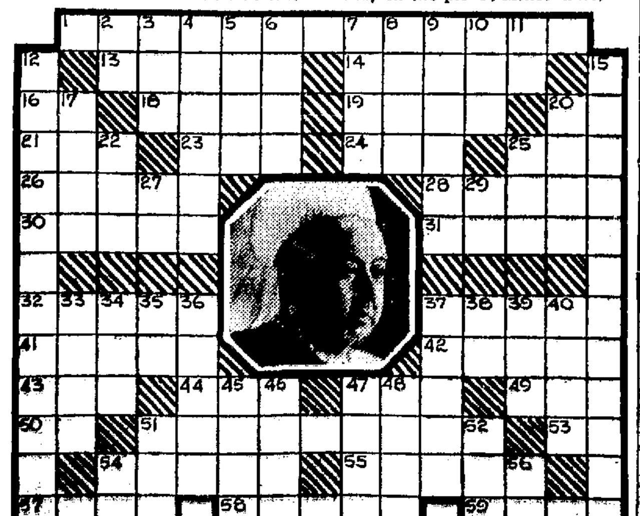
Answer to Previous Puzzle





SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

There's something about a souffle that captures everyone's interest and admiration. And while souffle-making seems most mysterious to the uninitiated, there's no conjuring trick about it. A few simple rules lead the way to a p rfect souffle.

The mixing of a souffle is of prime importance. Whites and yolks of eggs must be beaten separately the yolks with a rotary beater until thick and lemon colored and the whites on a platter with a wire whisk until stiff. Be sure to "fold" the whites into yolk mixture carefuly. The fluffy consistency of the finished souffle devents the breaking of the air bubbles vents the bearking of the air bubbles in the egg whites.

Long slow baking is also one of the serets of souffle making. Forty to fifty minutes in an average baking dish should be allowed for baking at a temperature of 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

When firm to the touch or when a sharp knife inserted in the center of the souffle comes out clean, the souffle is done.

Chocolate Souffle

This dessert is distinctly "smart" and for that reason suitable for company occasions. However, it is so nourishing that it makes a splendid family dessert when vegetables have been served in place of meat.

Two tablespons butter, 2 tablespons flour, 1 cup milk, 2 squares bitter chocolate, 6 tablespoons granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons hot water, 1-8 tablespoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 4 eggs.

Melt butter and stir in flour. When perfectly blended slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook and stir until mixture boils. Melt chocolate over hot water, add sugar and hot water and stir until thick and lemon colored. Beat until cool. Add salt to whites of eggs and beat until stiff. Add vanilla to cooked mixture and fold in whites of eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake forty-five minutes in a moderm oven. Serve with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with vanilla or a drop of oil of peppermint.

Fish Souffle

Fish souffle is delicious served with a creamed vegetable or Hollandaise sauce.

One cup flaked fish, 3 eggs, 1 cup soft stale bread crumbs, ½ cup cream, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Force fish through a coarse sieve or ricer. Combine cream and crumbs and cook, stirring constantly for five minutes. Add salt, pepper and parsley. Sprinkle lemon juice over fish and add to cooked crumbs. Add well beaten yolks of eggs and fold in whites beaten until stiff. Turn into a buttered dish and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Grape juice, cereal, cream, toasted codfish strips, corn muffins, milk coffee.

Luncheon: Fish souffle with creamed green beans, spring onions and radishes, toasted muffins, marmalade, milk, tea.

Dinner: Fricassee of chicken, steamed rice, French fried onions, pepper ring salad, lemon souffle, milk, coffee.

Two Philosophies

Raining! And it's cold, wet rain!
Peonies will blossom soon again!
Or if you choose: dark days like this
Are not our own ideas of bliss.
We know our spine the water chills;
Rain may be good for daffodils,
But we are subject to catarrh
And wet feet very dangerous are!
Raining! Cold bitter rain and harsh,
The lawn is almost now a marsh.
Good for roses: True enough!
But we need sun to do our stuff.
We find no keen enjoyment in
Getting ourselves soaked to the skin.
Rain may bring blossoms fair to see,
But it brings suffering to me.
Rain! And divergent points of view,
And both of them precisely true.
Rain brings blossoms and the green,
Which make the lovely summer scent;
Likewise to him who walks the street
For many days it spells defeat,
But the man praises or complains,
Grumbles or grins, some days it rains.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Black were Wednesday visitors in Texarkana

Litany services will be read on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at St. Marks Episcopal church.

The Paisley P. T. A. held a most interesting meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the Paisley school. A very helpful Bible lesson was given by Rev. Wallace R. Rogers, and a program on "Employment and the Child" was both instructive and interesting, special music was given by Luther Hollamon, Jr. Mrs. George Turner talked on different phases of the program subject, and summer plans was discussed by Mrs. Henry Taylor. This being the last meeting of the school term, the following new officers were installed by Mrs. O. A. Graves: President, Mrs. Charles Haynes; Vcie-President, Mrs. Chedester Hall; Recording secretary, Miss Mamie Briant; Corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Harrell; Treasurer, Mrs. H. O. Kyler. The meeting closed with Mrs. C. D. Lester instructing the committees. In the count of mothers, the dollar went to Mrs. Betts' room.

Mrs. C. C. Lewis and Mrs. George Wilson were Wednesday guests of Mrs. Hugh Latimer in Nashville.

J. L. Deloney of Foreman was the Wednesday night guest of Misses Marie and Nannie Purkins and other relatives.

On Wednesday afternoon at the Brookwood school, the Brookwood P. T. A. held their final meeting for the school term, with a splondid attendance and a most interesting program and the installation of the officers for the coming year, by Mrs. Rorsey McRae, as follows: President, Mrs. E. W. Dossett; Vice President, Mrs. Alfred Branan; Secretary, Mrs. James R. Henry, Jr.; Treasurer, Mrs. G. P. Cross.

The Cemetery Association will hold their May meeting Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Nora Carrigan, with Mrs. T. S. McDavitt as joint hostess.

On Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. M. Briant, the annual social meeting of the Bay View Reading club was held. Following the opening of the meeting by Miss Mamie Twitchell, second vice-president, both the president and first vice-president being absent, one of the cleverest and most amusing stunt and contest programs ever rendered in our city, was presented by Mrs. John S. Gibson, Sr., and Mrs. J. A. Henry opening with the introduction of world famous celebrities such as Billy Sunday, Will Rogers, Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, Greta Garbo, Aimee McPherson, Evangelist Crimm, Alex. Washburn, Slim Summerville and Miss Beryl Henry and many others noted in their especial line; the prize for the best impersonation went to Mrs. J. T. West who represented Billy Sunday, with Mrs. W. F. Saner impersonating Evangelist Crimm running her a close second; all were fine, but the honors went to the above two. A local paper was published and reviewed, and showed there must be a Walter Winchell, a Mark Sullivan, a Westbrook Pegler, a Fletcher Chenault, or a Robert Ripley in our midst that "were born to blush unseen, and waste their sweetness on the desert air." The reading of the local paper was followed by an animal parade, with Mrs. J. A. Henry as Ringmaster, with Miss Maggie Bell as the monkey, Miss Mamie Twitchell as the donkey and Mrs. E. E. White as the polar bear bringing forth the greatest round of applause, other of Hope's feminine dignities added much to this parade, for indeed the hands of the clock had been turned back, when there was no depression and fun and merriment reigned. A contest correctly named, "Shouting Proverbs" closed the program. During the social period, when a most attractive salad and ice course was served by Mrs. Briant and her joint hostess, Mrs. John S. Gibson Sr., the over-worked four muscles used in making a smile were allowed to seek their repose, while more solemn things were discussed. For this delightful occasion, the Briant home was aglow with a quantity of attractively arranged spring flowers, including lovely roses, syringa, red lilies and numerous varieties of smaller flowers.

A very delightful party of the spring season was given on Wednesday evening, when Mrs. A. B. Spraggins and Mrs. Earl Wolfe entertained at bridge, as special compliment to Mrs. R. L. Bush and Mrs. J. Hubert Bolton of Little Rock, at the home of Mrs. Spraggins on South Main street. Gracefully arranged spring flowers, including roses, sweet peas, springa and other garden flowers enhanced the beauty of the rooms, where bridge was played from six tables. In the score court, favors went to Mrs. S. L. Murphy, E. I. Rephan and Lex Helms. The honorees were given dainty gifts for remembrance. At the conclusion of the game, the hostesses served a most tempting plate lunch with hot coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Elven Barnes announce the arrival of a son, born Tuesday May 2.

Koreans Use Rice as Gold Standard

Dr. R. M. Wilson Writes Account of His Leper Work

Over in Korea rice is the gold standard, and since the price of rice has doubled this year the natives are having their financial troubles along with the rest of the world, writes Dr. R. M. Wilson to his home folk in Columbus, this county.

Dr. Wilson, Presbyterian missionary for 20 years, and son of J. S. Wilson of Columbus, is in charge of the medical colony at Soonchun, Korea, treating lepers. Acknowledging recent gift packages from friends in the United States, he writes:

"We are glad to get old clothes, spectacles, pencils, scarfs and the like for the lepers, and bright picture cards for the Sunday school work. Don't send unless yo uthink the package is worth the postage. You must decide that.

"We are developing a big, fine farm and home for the lepers and this year gardening will be stressed. There are five special things in the treatment of leprosy and these are all found in the farm life. These five things are 1st, Good Diet which will result from the garden, rabbits, pigs, etc. 2nd Regular Habits. 3rd Good Appetite. 4th Cheer and Joy. 5th Freedom from other diseases and of course chaulmoogra oil.

"These things all fit in so well with the farm and home life this year we will push these lines of work. Of course if a leper is looking day in and day out at his old paralyzed face which looks like a flat tire or at his claw fingers he will not improve. The gardens, rabbits, chickens, pigs and busy life will bring cheer.

"The result with treatments are now very encouraging and most of the cases gotten in the earlier stages can be entirely arrested. Last year we discharged 80 such cases. The monthly expense per leper in 1931 was six yen each which wts distributed as follows: food 3.50; clothing .28; fuel, light, school and church 1.04; wages and travel .36. The yen was around fifty cents. Since January 1st rice has about doubled in price so the expense this year will be higher. Rice is the gold standard here.

"The men number 385, women 249, boys 48 and girls 55. One hundred twenty-five students study daily under nine leper teachers. Women as always make the best patients for from childhood they have worked and are benefitted by keeping busy. The girls are given preference for entrance. There were but fifteen deaths last year; 21 are blind, 92 have eye trouble. Seven hundred thirty-three take oil by injection and mouth. Two hundred fifty cannot work and 15 walk on peg legs of their own making."

Pope to Follow Up Highway Pro[illegible]

Will Prosecute on Evidence of Late Highway Audit Commission

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The [illegible] prosecuting all claims of the [illegible] growing out of the far-reaching investigations of the State Highway Audit Commission has been [illegible] to Walter L. Pope, who as an attorney general acted as counsel to the commission.

His appointment as a special attorney for the state to represent it in litigation resulting from the commission's work, involving hundreds of thousands of dollars, made by Attorney General Hal Norwood, with the approval of Governor Futrell.

It was authorized by an act of the 1933 legislature.

The audit commission passed out of existence with the filing of its report with the legislature early this year. A bill to extend the life of the commission, with only three of its five members continuing to serve, did not get through the legislature.

Judge Pope's familiarity with the litigation over road contracts [illegible] ed by the audit commission led to his appointment.

As assistant attorney general, he instituted virtually all the suits to cover alleged overpayments by the state on highway contracts, many of which still are pending.

Judge Pope lived at Pocahontas before taking the position of assistant attorney general four years ago.

The act authorizing the appointment of special counsel appropriated an unexpended balance of $33,000 from the highway audit fund to finance the litigation.

"Her ladyship had her 'round ...he house plenty all last winter," Hetty said coldly. "If you ask me, ...he's better than the lot of them. ...She knows a person when you ...eet her on the street. She ain't afraid to say 'good morning' like a Christian when you see her."

Mrs. Peterman's manner became slightly unctuous. On all matters of social precedence in Belvedere she, having been general of the Lawrence household affairs for many years, felt herself eminently qualified to speak.

"Nice enough, as I said, but her station in life is quite different from the rest of these people. My mother always said to me, 'Nannie,' she said, 'always keep to your own station in life.' And I did. It's better so."

Hetty sniffed. "This is a free country," she contributed negligently. Then she wheeled, flushing deeply, as a masculine voice called her name.

"Jimmy, I didn't expect you back so soon!"

The big, grinning young man in chauffeur's uniform lounged in the doorway.

"Thought I'd keep my eye on you girls; so's you wouldn't get into mischief. How's things going?"

Hetty said virtuously, "We've been working like slaves all day. Be glad when this is over."

"Gonna be swell music," the young chauffeur said, jerking his head in the direction of the sun porch, whither the grand piano had already been conveyed. This room, too, was banked with all manner of flowering trees, roses in tubs, and the like. The drawing room and the library beyond had been cleared for action. Rugs had been rolled up, highly polished floors given an extra gloss, furniture pushed back. In the dining room which had an oval glassed-in breakfast room beyond, the caterer's men were busily laying. A hum of activity, tangible as the whir of bees, pervaded everything.

Sanders Lawrence, fresh and trim in white linen riding things, now came briskly down the stairs, surveying the scene.

"Everything's going well," she said, with a nod to her retainer. "James, you'll bring those people up from the 6 o'clock. Then, Mrs. Peterman, they'll change the rooms look very nice—and we go on to the club for dinner. We'll be back by 9:30. I don't expect anyone until 10, really, for the dancing, but it's just as well to be safe. I've borrowed Mr. Eustace's man, Kong, to do the cocktails. Show him where everything is. He'll be here before 7—"

AND she was gone, leaving behind her a faint, delicate scent. Everything Sandra did was well done. She was cool, competent, correct. At 22, she was the pride of a mother who loved her age. She loved this sort of thing—the whir and scurry of a big party. It was the very breath of life to her. Ever since her return from Europe the last time she had complained bitterly to her father of the dullness—in fact the lack of social life—in Belvedere. Now, in mid-July, she prepared to bring a little gayety to the somnolent town. She would give "a smart" party, the sort of affair a Gotham debutante might give at the Ritz. Everything would be perfect—even the food, drinks, things in aspic, music—everything!

As she went out the side door into the terraced and landscaped garden with the sapphire pool her father had been goaded into having built for her the year before, her eye took in the scene approvingly. Sondberg, the gnarled handyman, was at work on the ragged paths, trimming away the ragged grass. The roses were in full burst. There was a misty blue background of delphinium. It might, Sandra reflected, be a true Knollen garden, with at least 10 generations of culture behind it.

At the stables she found James, who had slipped around the back way as she went out the front. He was running a cloth lightly over the hood, adding unnecessary polish to the already shimmering chromium goddess who sprang, in full flight, from the nose of the engine.

She gave him a dazzling smile. "Thanks—James. You're sure I've plenty of gas? I've got to get local in good order this afternoon."

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Sandra. It's O. K."

She did wish American servants were more formal. Perhaps she could teach James, sometime, not to say "It. K." But he was a nice-looking boy, no doubt about that. A dash of the Gary Cooper flavor about him. His uniform fitted him perfectly.

SHE slid into the driver's seat, slapping her pockets, boy fashion. Sandra was an unconscious actress. When she wore riding clothes she adopted a gently masculine air. James sprang to attention.

"Match, miss?"

"Yes, thanks very much." She flipped a cigaret from her pigskin case and shook it into a corner of her mouth. The young man came close, holding the flame for her, cupping it with infinite care with one brown hand. Sandra felt his nearness—a little tingle went down her spine. She inhaled deeply. This wouldn't do. She would have to show James his place. Just because they'd picnicked together, quite informally, on Summit Hill, that day the distributor mixed up, was no reason he'd—well, friendly and democratic to the boy is one needn't misunderstand. That was the trouble with servants in this country. Give them an inch and they'd take a yard.

As the engine roted, leaping to be off, she gave the chauffeur a cool glance.

"Don't forget the 6 o'clock," she sang, making a turn.

Yes, he must be reminded that he was, after all, only her servant. She was the great lady. Why had she been so foolish, that day on Summit Hill? It had been surprising, he had reminded her, in his biggess and leanness, of Dan Cardigan. Was that it? Anyhow, for the attraction of an instant she had let him hold her in his arms. It had been the merest accident. She had tripped, stumbling over a tree stump. He had caught her. She had lain there for an instant longer than necessary. Oh, she had been mad! That was all—but it had been encouragement enough.

The man in olive green stared after her curiously as the dust hid the car from view.

"She's a cool one and that's the truth," he muttered to himself.

A girl in maid's uniform, watching from the pantry window, caught her lip within her teeth.

"If she don't leave him alone," she threatened to no one at all. "I'll—I'll—!" She did not finish her menacing sentence.

State Medical Meeting Closing Thursday at Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS—(AP)—The closing scientific session of the 38th annual convention of the Arkansas Medical Society which opened here Tuesday was featured Thursday morning by the showing of the new motion picture film, "The Canti Film" presented by Dr. Dewell Gann, Jr., of Little Rock, a motion picture recently made in Saint Bartholomews' hospital, London England.

Dr. Gann presented Wednesday night the "Great Peril," a popular motion picture which shows the rave ages of cancer and broadcast on the subject of cancer Tuesday, declaring that cancer presented one of the greatest problems confronting medical science today.

"It is killing one out of every 10 persons over 40 years of age and will take one hundred and twenty-five lives of our people in the United States this year.

However, he laid stress upon the statement that the vast majority of cancer deaths could be avoided as the cancer in early stages is regarded as curable.

Dr. Don Smith is representing Hope at the medical convention.

TO DISCUSS TRADE

vate debt contracts, America is establishing a dangerous precedent. Her example will hardly encourage foreign debtors to try to continue to fulfill their obligations.

"What is sauce to the goose is sauce to the gander."

Some comments, however, were more restrained, while prominence was given to explanatory and justificatory statements cabled from America.

Meantime Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald returned to London today "buoked up" by his talks with President Roosevelt in Washington and ready to face political revolt within his national government.

This revolt, centering on tariff issues, may exist rather than hinder him in bringing Britain around to support the American proposal for a world tariff truce throughout the world economic conference. This is the view of some of Mr. MacDonald's supporters, who look upon the present wrangling in the House of Commons over the new trade pacts with Germany, Denmark and Argentina as a possible way out of Britain's tariff controversy.

ROOSEVELT PLANS

it asserts, adding that through co-ordination "unusual economies into scores of millions of dollars would be possible."

Blames Local Taxes

The committee draws two other illuminating conclusions. One is that crystalization of the rails as a whole is not excessive; the other that state and local taxation, not federal, is the chief cause of the railroads' distress.

Nicathville, for spokesman, charges that 80 per cent of the economies to be produced by eliminating unnecessary services, more efficient freight routing, joint use of terminals, and adjustment of freight rates would be made at the workers' expense. The railroad plan, formulated largely by F. H. Prince, Boston banker, which would force all railroads into seven regional systems, is attacked by labor as an especially drastic scheme for reducing employment.

The plan before the president sets not only rails, busses, trucks, pipelines, airlines and waterways, but also telegraph, telephone, cables and roadside shipping under federal control. Another makes the Interstate Commerce Commission a division of a transportation bureau which would control all the transport methods of the nation.

Loyalty to British Abolished by Irish

De Valera Expects to Proclaim New Free Republic

DUBLIN, Irish Free State—(AP)—It is hoped that he soon would have the pleasure of proclaiming Ireland a free republic was expressed Wednesday night by President Eamon de Valera in a hushed Dail as debate closed following enactment of a bill removing the oath of allegiance to the British crown.

The president said he was resolved to wipe from the existing constitution "every connection with the so-called rights of the Irish people."

"We are going to remove from the constitution every vestige of inferiority," the president declared. "The people will be consulted before the republic is declared."

Holding aloft a copy of a draft constitution submitted by an Irish delegation to Great Britain in 1922 which was amended by the British, de Valera said they would take from it every clause Great Britain forced them to insert.

It might, Sandra reflected, be a true Knollen garden, with at least 10 generations of culture behind it.

At the stables she found James, who had slipped around the back way as she went out the front. He was running a cloth lightly over the hood, adding unnecessary polish to the already shimmering chromium goddess who sprang, in full flight, from the nose of the engine.

She gave him a dazzling smile. "Thanks—James. You're sure I've plenty of gas? I've got to get local in good order this afternoon."

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Sandra. It's O. K."

She did wish American servants were more formal. Perhaps she could teach James, sometime, not to say "It. K." But he was a stunning-looking boy, no doubt about that. A dash of the Gary Cooper flavor about him. His uniform fitted him perfectly.

SHE slid into the driver's seat, slapping her pockets, boy fashion. Sandra was an unconscious actress. When she wore riding clothes she adopted a gently masculine air. James sprang to attention.

"Match, miss?"

"Yes, thanks very much." She flipped a cigaret from her pigskin case and shook it into a corner of her mouth. The young man came close, holding the flame for her, cupping it with infinite care with one brown hand. Sandra felt his nearness—a little tingle went down her spine. She inhaled deeply. This wouldn't do. She would have to show James his place. Just because they'd picnicked together, quite informally, on Summit Hill, that day the distributor mixed up, was no reason he'd—well, friendly and democratic to the boy is one needn't misunderstand. That was the trouble with servants in this country. Give them an inch and they'd take a yard.

As the engine roted, leaping to be off, she gave the chauffeur a cool glance.

"Don't forget the 6 o'clock," she sang, making a turn.

Yes, he must be reminded that he was, after all, only her servant. She was the great lady. Why had she been so foolish, that day on Summit Hill? It had been surprising, he had reminded her, in his bigness and leanness, of Dan Cardigan. Was that it? Anyhow, for the attraction of an instant she had let him hold her in his arms. It had been the merest accident. She had tripped, stumbling over a tree stump. He had caught her. She had lain there for an instant longer than necessary. Oh, she had been mad! That was all—but it had been encouragement enough.

The man in olive green stared after her curiously as the dust hid the car from view.

"She's a cool one and that's the truth," he muttered to himself.

A girl in maid's uniform, watching from the pantry window, caught her lip within her teeth.

"If she don't leave him alone," she threatened to no one at all. "I'll—I'll—!" She did not finish her menacing sentence.

Brisk Trade Helps Cattle and Hogs

Yard Prices Rise Nevenely, However, Chicago Reports

CHICAGO—Trade in live stock Tuesday was featured by an active and unevenly higher market despite a slow demand for dressed beef.

All buyers seemed to be in need of steers, with Eastern killers particularly anxious for kinds selling in the upper and lower registers of the trade, although intermediate classes were not neglected.

General steer and she stock values were 25c up, while bulls and calves were strong.

A steady to 5c higher trade embraced hog offerings and lambs ruled steady to strong.

Top hogs moved up to $4.05 despite lack of competition from shippers. The East took out only 200 hogs. Others killers, however, cleared the fresh supply, leaving 2,000 over again.

'Looking Forward' Film of Business

Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone in New Saenger Feature

"Looking Forward" showing Thursday and Friday at the Saenger, deals with the lives of two business men and their families under the stress of the depression. Lewis Stone plays the role of a department store owner while Barrymore, at the other end of the economic scale, is a bookeeper who was injured in the service of the firm. Barrymore again has the sympathetic role of an understanding, dispelling the heart-warming excuse of his Kringelein in "Grand Hotel."

The store owner, fighting disaster, is forced to dismiss his old bookkeeper, while the latter, faced with the loss of his livelihood, finds his family rallying around him to make a new and better start in life. The store magnate is deserted by his flighty young wife and is on the brink of selling the store to a rival. When everything seems bleakest, his children come forward, and by their courage and loyalty help him to pull through.

An exceptionally fine cast portrays the large number of characters in "Looking Forward." In addition to Barrymore and Stone, the featured players include Benita Hume, Elizabeth Allan and Phillips Holmes.

"Of course. And his sister, Miss ...eraldine. That new Mr. Eus- ...is, too.

"You saw the list," Hetty broke ...in, eyes glittering with a true gos- ...ip's relish. "How about that pret- ...y O'Dare girl?"

MRS. PETERMAN shook her ...ead. "Not her. This is for ...eal swells, didn't I tell you? The ...O'Dares are nice enough, but poor ...as church mice."

"Her ladyship had her 'round ...he house plenty all last winter," Hetty said coldly. "If you ask me, ...he's better than the lot of them. ...She knows a person when you ...eet her on the street. She ain't afraid to say 'good morning' like a Christian when you see her."

Mrs. Peterman's manner became slightly unctuous. On all matters of social precedence in Belvedere she, having been general of the Lawrence household affairs for many years, felt herself eminently qualified to speak.

"Nice enough, as I said, but her station in life is quite different from the rest of these people. My mother always said to me, 'Nannie,' she said, 'always keep to your own station in life.' And I did. It's better so."

Hetty sniffed. "This is a free country," she contributed negligently. Then she wheeled, flushing deeply, as a masculine voice called her name.

"Jimmy, I didn't expect you back so soon!"

The big, grinning young man in chauffeur's uniform lounged in the doorway.

"Thought I'd keep my eye on you girls; so's you wouldn't get into mischief. How's things going?"

Hetty said virtuously, "We've been working like slaves all day. Be glad when this is over."

"Gonna be swell music," the young chauffeur said, jerking his head in the direction of the sun porch, whither the grand piano had already been conveyed. This room, too, was banked with all manner of flowering trees, roses in tubs, and the like. The drawing room and the library beyond had been cleared for action. Rugs had been rolled up, highly polished floors given an extra gloss, furniture pushed back. In the dining room which had an oval glassed-in breakfast room beyond, the caterer's men were busily laying. A hum of activity, tangible as the whir of bees, pervaded everything.

Sanders Lawrence, fresh and trim in white linen riding things, now came briskly down the stairs, surveying the scene.

"Everything's going well," she said, with a nod to her retainer. "James, you'll bring those people up from the 6 o'clock. Then, Mrs. Peterman, they'll change the rooms look very nice—and we go on to the club for dinner. We'll be back by 9:30. I don't expect anyone until 10, really, for the dancing, but it's just as well to be safe. I've borrowed Mr. Eustace's man, Kong, to do the cocktails. Show him where everything is. He'll be here before 7—"

AND she was gone, leaving behind her a faint, delicate scent. Everything Sandra did was well done. She was cool, competent, correct. At 22, she was the pride of a mother who loved her age. She loved this sort of thing—the whir and scurry of a big party. It was the very breath of life to her. Ever since her return from Europe the last time she had complained bitterly to her father of the dullness—in fact the lack of social life—in Belvedere. Now, in mid-July, she prepared to bring a little gayety to the somnolent town. She would give "a smart" party, the sort of affair a Gotham debutante might give at the Ritz. Everything would be perfect—even the food, drinks, things in aspic, music—everything!

As she went out the side door into the terraced and landscaped garden with the sapphire pool her father had been goaded into having built for her the year before, her eye took in the scene approvingly. Sondberg, the gnarled handyman, was at work on the ragged paths, trimming away the ragged grass. The roses were in full burst. There was a misty blue background of delphinium. It might, Sandra reflected, be a true Knollen garden, with at least 10 generations of culture behind it.

At the stables she found James, who had slipped around the back way as she went out the front. He was running a cloth lightly over the hood, adding unnecessary polish to the already shimmering chromium goddess who sprang, in full flight, from the nose of the engine.

She gave him a dazzling smile. "Thanks—James. You're sure I've plenty of gas? I've got to get local in good order this afternoon."

State Medical Meeting Closing Thursday at Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS—(AP)—The closing scientific session of the 38th annual convention of the Arkansas Medical Society which opened here Tuesday was featured Thursday morning by the showing of the new motion picture film, "The Canti Film" presented by Dr. Dewell Gann, Jr., of Little Rock, a motion picture recently made in Saint Bartholomews' hospital, London England.

Dr. Gann presented Wednesday night the "Great Peril," a popular motion picture which shows the rave ages of cancer and broadcast on the subject of cancer Tuesday, declaring that cancer presented one of the greatest problems confronting medical science today.

"It is killing one out of every 10 persons over 40 years of age and will take one hundred and twenty-five lives of our people in the United States this year.

However, he laid stress upon the statement that the vast majority of cancer deaths could be avoided as the cancer in early stages is regarded as curable.

Dr. Don Smith is representing Hope at the medical convention.

vate debt contracts, America is establishing a dangerous precedent. Her example will hardly encourage foreign debtors to try to continue to fulfill their obligations.

"What is sauce to the goose is sauce to the gander."

Some comments, however, were more restrained, while prominence was given to explanatory and justificatory statements cabled from America.

Meantime Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald returned to London today "buoked up" by his talks with President Roosevelt in Washington and ready to face political revolt within his national government.

This revolt, centering on tariff issues, may exist rather than hinder him in bringing Britain around to support the American proposal for a world tariff truce throughout the world economic conference. This is the view of some of Mr. MacDonald's supporters, who look upon the present wrangling in the House of Commons over the new trade pacts with Germany, Denmark and Argentina as a possible way out of Britain's tariff controversy.

ROOSEVELT PLANS

it asserts, adding that through co-ordination "unusual economies into scores of millions of dollars would be possible."

Blames Local Taxes

The committee draws two other illuminating conclusions. One is that crystalization of the rails as a whole is not excessive; the other that state and local taxation, not federal, is the chief cause of the railroads' distress.

Nicathville, for spokesman, charges that 80 per cent of the economies to be produced by eliminating unnecessary services, more efficient freight routing, joint use of terminals, and adjustment of freight rates would be made at the workers' expense. The railroad plan, formulated largely by F. H. Prince, Boston banker, which would force all railroads into seven regional systems, is attacked by labor as an especially drastic scheme for reducing employment.

The plan before the president sets not only rails, busses, trucks, pipelines, airlines and waterways, but also telegraph, telephone, cables and roadside shipping under federal control. Another makes the Interstate Commerce Commission a division of a transportation bureau which would control all the transport methods of the nation.

Loyalty to British Abolished by Irish

De Valera Expects to Proclaim New Free Republic

DUBLIN, Irish Free State—(AP)—It is hoped that he soon would have the pleasure of proclaiming Ireland a free republic was expressed Wednesday night by President Eamon de Valera in a hushed Dail as debate closed following enactment of a bill removing the oath of allegiance to the British crown.

The president said he was resolved to wipe from the existing constitution "every connection with the so-called rights of the Irish people."

"We are going to remove from the constitution every vestige of inferiority," the president declared. "The people will be consulted before the republic is declared."

Holding aloft a copy of a draft constitution submitted by an Irish delegation to Great Britain in 1922 which was amended by the British, de Valera said they would take from it every clause Great Britain forced them to insert.

Mrs. Bernice Jordan spent Monday with with Mrs. Myrtle McMillan.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Terrell moved to Hope Tuesday.

Bob Dean Caudle and Rena Gladney spent Sunda afternoon with Wanda and Elerian Aslin.

Harold Sanford and little son Hoyland and Chancellor spent Wednesday night with his sister, Mrs. Dottie Aslin and family.

Adam Rogers and wife visited Wednesday night with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Thad Vines.

Mrs. Milton Jordan and yafy were Sunday guests of Mrs. Nellie Leach.

Farrell Mitchell and grandmother Mitchell spent Wednesday at Thad Vines'.

Mavis and Glenn Aslin called on their friend, Eula Dean Caudle Thursday afternoon.

Jim Jordan who has been with his brother Ray in Illinois for the past several months returned to his home here Wednesday. He states that the buds were just swelling on the trees there now.

Mrs. Adell Sanford and two children and Mrs. Rce C. Gray spent Friday evening with Mrs. Vera Caudle.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Bearden and litti son Glendon were Sunday afternoon visitors at H. B. Sanfords.

Mrs. Rce O. Gray accompanied them home for a few days visit.

The Karber young folks were Sunday afternoon callers at Jordan home. They removed several stands of bees from the Lewis Richardson place to their home near Centerville.

Homer Vines moved Aunt Leatha Frizzel Saturday from the Clint Martin place to the home of her son, Thomas Frizell in Hope.

Harold Sanford and family spent Saturday night with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sanford.

Master Harold Sanford spent Friday with his uncle Silas Sanford at his oval glassed-in breakfast room, beyond, the caterer's men were busily laying. A hum of activity, tangible as the whir of bees, pervaded everything.

Sanders Lawrence, fresh and trim in white linen riding things, now came briskly down the stairs, surveying the scene.

"Everything's going well," she said, with a nod to her retainer. "James, you'll bring those people up from the 6 o'clock. Then, Mrs. Peterman, they'll change the rooms look very nice—and we go on to the club for dinner. We'll be back by 9:30. I don't expect anyone until 10, really, for the dancing, but it's just as well to be safe. I've borrowed Mr. Eustace's man, Kong, to do the cocktails. Show him where everything is. He'll be here before 7—"

AND she was gone, leaving behind her a faint, delicate scent. Everything Sandra did was well done. She was cool, competent, correct. At 22, she was the pride of a mother who loved her age. She loved this sort of thing—the whir and scurry of a big party. It was the very breath of life to her. Ever since her return from Europe the last time she had complained bitterly to her father of the dullness—in fact the lack of social life—in Belvedere. Now, in mid-July, she prepared to bring a little gayety to the somnolent town. She would give "a smart" party, the sort of affair a Gotham debutante might give at the Ritz. Everything would be perfect—even the food, drinks, things in aspic, music—everything!

As she went out the side door into the terraced and landscaped garden with the sapphire pool her father had been goaded into having built for her the year before, her eye took in the scene approvingly. Sondberg, the gnarled handyman, was at work on the ragged paths, trimming away the ragged grass. The roses were in full burst. There was a misty blue background of delphinium. It might, Sandra reflected, be a true Knollen garden, with at least 10 generations of culture behind it.

At the stables she found James, who had slipped around the back way as she went out the front. He was running a cloth lightly over the hood, adding unnecessary polish to the already shimmering chromium goddess who sprang, in full flight, from the nose of the engine.

She gave him a dazzling smile. "Thanks—James. You're sure I've plenty of gas? I've got to get local in good order this afternoon."

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Sandra. It's O. K."

She did wish American servants were more formal. Perhaps she could teach James, sometime, not to say "It. K." But he was a stunning-looking boy, no doubt about that. A dash of the Gary Cooper flavor about him. His uniform fitted him perfectly.

SHE slid into the driver's seat, slapping her pockets, boy fashion. Sandra was an unconscious actress. When she wore riding clothes she adopted a gently masculine air. James sprang to attention.

"Match, miss?"

"Yes, thanks very much." She flipped a cigaret from her pigskin case and shook it into a corner of her mouth. The young man came close, holding the flame for her, cupping it with infinite care with one brown hand. Sandra felt his nearness—a little tingle went down her spine. She inhaled deeply. This wouldn't do. She would have to show James his place. Just because they'd picnicked together, quite informally, on Summit Hill, that day the distributor mixed up, was no reason he'd—well, friendly and democratic to the boy is one needn't misunderstand. That was the trouble with servants in this country. Give them an inch and they'd take a yard.

As the engine roted, leaping to be off, she gave the chauffeur a cool glance.

"Don't forget the 6 o'clock," she sang, making a turn.

Yes, he must be reminded that he was, after all, only her servant. She was the great lady. Why had she been so foolish, that day on Summit Hill? It had been surprising, he had reminded her, in his bigness and leanness, of Dan Cardigan. Was that it? Anyhow, for the attraction of an instant she had let him hold her in his arms. It had been the merest accident. She had tripped, stumbling over a tree stump. He had caught her. She had lain there for an instant longer than necessary. Oh, she had been mad! That was all—but it had been encouragement enough.

The man in olive green stared after her curiously as the dust hid the car from view.

"She's a cool one and that's the truth," he muttered to himself.

A girl in maid's uniform, watching from the pantry window, caught her lip within her teeth.

"If she don't leave him alone," she threatened to no one at all. "I'll—I'll—!" She did not finish her menacing sentence.

Brisk Trade Helps Cattle and Hogs

Yard Prices Rise Nevenely, However, Chicago Reports

CHICAGO—Trade in live stock Tuesday was featured by an active and unevenly higher market despite a slow demand for dressed beef.

All buyers seemed to be in need of steers, with Eastern killers particularly anxious for kinds selling in the upper and lower registers of the trade, although intermediate classes were not neglected.

General steer and she stock values were 25c up, while bulls and calves were strong.

A steady to 5c higher trade embraced hog offerings and lambs ruled steady to strong.

Top hogs moved up to $4.05 despite lack of competition from shippers. The East took out only 200 hogs. Others killers, however, cleared the fresh supply, leaving 2,000 over again.

'Looking Forward' Film of Business

Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone in New Saenger Feature

"Looking Forward" showing Thursday and Friday at the Saenger, deals with the lives of two business men and their families under the stress of the depression. Lewis Stone plays the role of a department store owner while Barrymore, at the other end of the economic scale, is a bookeeper who was injured in the service of the firm. Barrymore again has the sympathetic role of an understanding, dispelling the heart-warming excuse of his Kringelein in "Grand Hotel."

The store owner, fighting disaster, is forced to dismiss his old bookkeeper, while the latter, faced with the loss of his livelihood, finds his family rallying around him to make a new and better start in life. The store magnate is deserted by his flighty young wife and is on the brink of selling the store to a rival. When everything seems bleakest, his children come forward, and by their courage and loyalty help him to pull through.

An exceptionally fine cast portrays the large number of characters in "Looking Forward." In addition to Barrymore and Stone, the featured players include Benita Hume, Elizabeth Allan and Phillips Holmes.

States to Vote on Prohi Repealer

Indications That Necessary 36 Will Act Before End of the Year

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Citizens of 36 states will vote within the next few months to register their views on the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, enough to make it the law of the land, if ratification is ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states.

Indications today were that the 36 states may act before the end of the year.

Two states—Michigan and Wisconsin—have voted overwhelmingly to wipe the amendment from the constitution. Two more, New York and Delaware will cast their votes between now and November.

Anti-prohibition leaders, headed by Robert Bilsone, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, have expressed confidence of victory in each of these states, while Dr. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, points to the election of delegates in Indiana, June 6, as the first real battleground where a "decisive fight" will be made.

If Indiana rejects the repeal proposal, McBride said, "the Eighteenth amendment will remain in the constitution, plus."

Bilsone said today, "We are confident that by the end of the month the important initial processes of repeal will have been undertaken in almost three-fourth of the necessary 36 states."

Citing the possibility of action in 36 states this year, Bilsone said, "we do not concede the loss of a single state."

Design for Flowers

By HELEN WELSHIMER

DEDDLING men are strolling by Calling daffodils,
Spring has come and potted plants
Sit on window sills;
I am sure they'd rather climb
Up the clean, bright air
From a colored flower bed
Than a beige somewhere.

DAFFODILS and hyacinths
Too intend to bloom
Need cool winds and cleansing rains
And some stretching room.
How can any flower bed
Hold a gay head up
When it gets its daily drink
From a water cup?

"I cannot really enjoy anything," said the young woman, "because I have a sort of fear of terror behind it."

"Most of us have a certain heaviness of heart we can't shake off," I replied.

"I don't know ho wother people are, I've often wondered," she said. "I hope everyone isn't like me. Ever since I was a little girl I have had a dread of something. I can't tell what it is. Maybe I'm what they call a moral coward. Perhaps I can't face life. But really I never enjoy anything. No matter how happy I ought to be—no matter what's going on, a party, or new clothes or—or spring. I have a heavy heart. I know I am abnormal for some reason or other!"

Here or Common?

I had my doubts about that and said so. Is she really abnormal, this unhappy young person who cannot seem to find contentment or joy in anything she does? On the contrary, if the truth were known, I believe she is more common than uncommon. I believe there are thousands of adults and children who cannot shake off this feeling of dread, or heaviness, no matter what happens.

Psychologists tell us that it is a hangover from those sons when man lived in constant terror of his life. Perhaps. But do all wild animals live with dread in their hearts? Aren't the forest birds happy even when they sing. Is there always the shadow of the imaginary hawk or eagle over their their lives?

Shocks of Childhood

I cannot think so. Weariness and sudden alarm cannot be classed with this utter terror of living. They are different things altogether.

Again it may be caused by extreme ego, where introspection is daily habit and the world rotates around self. Usually the introvert is not happy. Any sensitive soul can never forget himself and ever imagines trouble—he really jumps ahead to seize it and bring it to his heart.

But I cannot believe this is the answer either. I believe it lies outside of either personality or heredity. I believe it is the result of a succession of shocks in early childhood.

It is fear in its most eerible form.

Books tell us that we are born with certain indescribable fears including that of death.

Don't Frighten Children

It proves no point particularly concerning these terror-ridden people. It is hardly conceivable that some would be bends and strains! Guaranteed. And SAMSONBAK is Sanforized. It won't shrink—ever. How Milton Lost Eyesight Recalled

One Eye Began Failing at 33—He Was Blind at Age of 46

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The great poet, Milton, writer of "Paradise Lost," was blind during much of his lifetime. This blindness is, no doubt, associated largely with the nature of his writings and with his philosophy of life. There have been many considerations of the character of his blindness, and this moved Dr. William H. Wilmer of the great ophthalmologic institue which bears his name to make an analysis of published writings concerning reasons for the loss of Milton's sight.

The father of John Milton died at 84 years of age, and read without glasses all his life. His mother died at 65, and it was reported that she had week eyes and uses spectacles after she was 30 years old. In his early youth the boy suffered from digestive disturbances and later in life from gout.

His eyes were naturally weak and he suffered from headaches. From his twelfth year on he abused his eyesight, reading until midnight with the type of artificial light that was available in the beginning of the 17th century. This overuse of his eyes continued as long as Milton could see manuscript.

The poet was born in 1608. About 1641, when he was 33 years of age, he began to have trouble with his left eye. The sight grew steadily worse and 10 years later that eye was entirely blind. A few years after the onset of the disease in the left eye, the right eye became affected, and by 1654 that eye admitted only a tiny speck of light.

In available letters it appears that there was use of the eyes, but gradual failure of vision. He had all the usual symptoms of dancing objects before the eyes, occasional flashes of light and similar disturbances.

There have been many suggestions as to the reasons for Milton's loss of sight. It is not likely that it was due to detachment of the retina, because that comes on suddenly, and is, as Dr. Wilmer says, accompanied by a feeling that a black curtain has suddenly dropped before the eye. Occasionally there are fireworks, such as flashes of vivid light and floating colored disks before the eye, and Milton makes no record of such symptoms day and night.

Except for his failing vision, indigestion and gout, Milton seems to have had good general health. It is possible that he suffered with a tendency to nearsightedness. Both his father and mother were nearsighted. Milton, as a boy, may have been associated with inflammation of the lens and with eyestrain from reading, perhaps also with uncorrected errors of vision.

It seems hardly likely that he suffered from cataract, because it does not accord with the general history of his case and there is no record that any of his friends observed a grayness of the pupils of his eyes.

Dr. Wilmer is inclined to believe that Milton sufered with nearsightedness complicated by glaucoma. Glaucoma is the cause of one per cent of disturbances of the eyes. It occurs at all ages, increasing with every decade of life after 30. In this condition, there is a tendency to increased pressure within the eye due to interference with the mechanism of drainage of fluid from the eye. The fact that Milton had gout would seem to predispose toward glaucoma, and certainly the overuse of his eyes might have been a factor.

Surface Work Is Started on No. 2

Highway Dept. Pulverizing Bad Asphalt and Tamping It Down

EL DORADO, Ark.—Resurfacing operations on Highway No. 2 between El Dorado and Texarkana have been started by state engineers and the entire road is expected to be in excellent condition within six weeks, according to Frank H. Burnside, district engineer of Hope.

The asphalt-topped highway has been in bad condition for more than a year and heavy traffic and lack of maintenance have developed huge holes in the surface of the important southwest Arkansas highway.

The asphalt surface is being scarified and shoulders rebuilt wherever necessary. Work was started west started west fro the Union-Columbia county line where the highway joins the concrete paving 15 miles west of El Dorado. The workers will move on to Bodcaw, while another crew will begin work at Lewisville and move east some time next week.

A large tractor, a grader and a scarifier are pulverizing the asphalt which will be bound back into a hard surface by traffic. Mr. Burnside stated that after the finely-crushed asphalt is tamped back into shape, the surface will be as good or better than when a good gravel highway. He said no more asphalt will be laid on the highway at present.

Here and There

—Editorial By Alex. H. Washburn—

JOSEPH V. M'KEE, Scottsman who succeeded "Jimmy" Walker as mayor of New York when it got tired of a clown and wanted a real man, has quit politics for a banking job. McKee's parting shot at politics is that it is "disgusting."

The people of the City of New York had great faith in McKee. Inspired by a newspaper campaign hundreds of thousands of voters wrote his name in on the ballot.

But he didn't win. O'Brien, a judge, had the support of Tammany Hall—and today O'Brien is mayor.

McKee's verdict on politics will be echoed by millions of fellow Americans. But he stands head and shoulders above them—he speaks from experience, not theory.

There is nothing alarming in this verdict from a man who has given as many years of his life to public service as McKee has.

What is alarming is the number of Americans who echo McKee, yet are too proud to run for office, and too lazy to vote for or against those who do.

I honor McKee, whatever he thinks. But I despise the high-hat, sniff-sniff chorus-boys.

It looks like the United States government is going to teach Dr. A. B. (To-Hell-With-the-Constitution) Anginton some respect for the constitution after all.

Governor Futrell is advised Friday that with Abington's still prohibiting deficiency judgments now on the statute books, Arkansas may not be able to qualify for relief under the federal farm mortgage refuding plan.

Abington was going to do something in a hurry for the relief of debtors.

But the federal government, loaning new money for old, says it isn't coming into a state where the law threatens to saddle it with a loss.

Governor Futrell is deeply pained. He recalls he let the Abington bill become a law without his signature.

Something has to tie Cone to bring Arkansas under the provisions of federal relief. The last recourse now is the state supreme court, which will be prayed to deliver us from Dr. Abington's "relief" bill.

Talk about debts is always painful.

But what we are beginning to realize is that the right to get into debt by a debtor is equal to the right to get out again. It may scale down the payments, and lighten the interest—but it's a long way from "no pay, just the same.

It can't be any other way.

A debt is evidence of the personal liberty to make a loan. We can't escape the one without losing the other.

Comptroller Hits Back at Humphrey for Audit Censure

He Recalls That Auditor Let Fake Warrants Go by Under Old Law, Too

FORGERIES IN 1931

Comptroller Says New Law Hasn't Changed Responsibility

LITTLE ROCK—Declaring that efforts to discredit an act intended to promote honesty and economy "will not register with the taxpayers," State Comptroller Griffin Smith issued a statement Thursday defending the 1933 pro-audit law against criticism of State Auditor J. Oscar Humphrey, who told newspaper men that forgeries discovered after a book of 25 voucher-warrants had been stolen from a safe in the penitentiary office at Tucker state prison farm resulted from the new system of handling vouchers and warrants.

Mr. Humphrey said he never had heard of a forged state warrant before the pre-audit law was passed.

"Under the old law all blank state warrants were kept in a safe in the auditor's office, but under the present law, the disbursing agent of each department and institution keeps the blank warrants," Mr. Humphrey said. "Instead of the state auditor being responsible for the warrants, the responsibility has been placed with a couple of ignorant disbursing agents which increases the opportunities for theft or misuse of the warrants."

Refreshes Auditor's Memory

Answering Mr. Humphrey's statement, Mr. Smith said responsibility is exactly where it was before the pre-audit law was passed and added that in 1931 "warrants were issued by the present state auditor and forged vouchers in the aggregate sum of $263.40 of which $262 still remain uncollected." The comptroller referred to state bonwy vouchers said to have been issued by a former district office. Some of the vouchers never were received but were intercepted by the state auditor on nine of the vouchers and the warrants were cashed at the state treasurer's office. A former employe of the Highway Department served a jail sentence in Memphis in connection with passing the forged vouchers in that city.

The Governor's Response.

Comptroller Smith's statement follows:

"The pre-audit act is blamed by Mr. Humphrey for a condition permitting forgeries of warrants. He says he got by having said that "instead of the state auditor being responsible for the warrants, the responsibility has been placed on a couple of hundred disbursing agents."

"Responsibility is exactly where it was before the pre-audit law was enacted. Then, as now, disbursing agents were not charged with the vouchers, and no record was kept with respect to quantity, or serial numbers. The good branch remains intact. The $156.78 which Mr. Humphrey had photographed, was the fourth presented, three of which passed back into circulation without even a memorandum.

"In 1931 there was no pre-audit law, but highway warrants Nos. 33305, 33312, 33799, 33791, 33792, 34041, 34703, 35462 and 37337 were issued by the present auditor on forged vouchers in the aggregate sum of $263.40, of which amount $262 still remains uncollected. Recovery was had on warrant No. 34041, in the sum of $50.50, on warrant No. 35469, in the sum of $40.40, and on warrant No. 37371, in the sum of $50.50, stealing $141.40. These transactions might be borne in mind when comparing merits and demmerits of the old and the new system."

McMath Child's Kidnaping Is Laid to Family Friend

Boston American Says High Society Friends Sought "Shakedown"

NONE RACKETEERS

Business Associate of Father Offers to Become a Hostage

BOSTON, Mass.—(AP)—The Boston American says in a copyrighted story Friday that Margaret McMath, kidnaped from school in Harwichport last Tuesday, will be returned to her parents within 24 hours.

The American says that a person well known to the McMath family was the brains of the plot, intending to extort money from the child's wealthy grandparents in Detroit.

The men participating in the plot were rehearsed for three days before the kidnaping, the paper says.

No gangster or racketeer had any part in it, the paper declares.

Offers to Be Hostage

HARWICHPORT, Mass.—(AP)—William Lee, Harwichport shipbuilder, Thursday night told state police he would gladly give himself as hostage for the safe return of 10-year-old Margaret McMath.

A business associate of Neil McMath, father of the girl who was kidnaped Tuesday after being lured from her classroom, Lee made the offer to add more means of contact with the abductors.

A plea by the parents of the child that the state police withdraw from the case for 24 hours to give the kidnapers further leeway to negotiating with the McMath family was refused after Gen. Daniel Needham, state police chief, had conferred with Governor Ely.

President Flays Severe Price Cuts

Cut-Throat Competition Frowned on in C. of C. Address

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The government's ready assistance in any movement on the part of industry to rid itself of cut-throat competition was pledged Thursday night by President Roosevelt.

Addressing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which for several days had argued the question of government-industry relations, the president called for a rising wage scale and asked leaders to be more concerned with restoring general prosperity than with fostering their own particular branch of industry alone.

"In almost every industry, an overwhelming majority of the units of the industry are wholly willing to work together to prevent over-production, to prevent unfair wages, to eliminate unfair competitive practices," he said. "In the past success in attaining these objectives has been prevented by a small minority of units in many industries. I can assure you that you will have the co-operation of your government in bringing these minorities to understand that their unfair practices are contrary to a sound public policy."

Judge's Evidence Is Kept a Secret

Not Known Whether He Revealed Names of His Attackers

LE MARS, Ia.—(AP)—An elderly judge told a military court Thursday how a mob of farmers dragged him from his court, threatened him with hanging, defected into the jail corridor and finally left him unconscious.

The four members of the court did not reveal whether Judge C. C. Bradley, 54, gave the names of the leaders of the farmers seeking to halt mortgage foreclosures.

After hearing Judge Bradley's story, the court divided into four units and continued hearing evidence on the riot a week ago at the O'Brien county courthouse.

Touching Sermon Given by Crimm

Evangelist Preaches on Story of Lazarus and the Rich Man

Evangelist B. B. Crimm left off his statements concerning bridge, ball games, shows, dances and poker games and preached a sermon at the tabernacle Thursday night that brought tears to his audience.

It was the most powerful and touching sermon thus far, as the evangelist poured forth the message of God's inevitable dealings with man.

Rev. Ellis Fuller, pastor of the Lake, the Rev. Mr. Crimm portrayed the story of Lazarus and the rich man.

Continuing he stated:

"Isn't it a strange thing how the rich man, when he got to hell, prayed for himself and then his brethren. He was too busy to go to prayer meeting when he was on earth, yes, he was just like some of you, you could think of everything to do but would not keep you away from prayer meeting. Now over there, it's too late to pull off a prayer meeting when you get to hell. Better get caught up with your prayering here, too late then. For every knee shall bow and every tongue confess' but the trouble is, some of you will do it when it's too late, just like the rich man."

"Away back in the distant past, God spoke and brought this world into being, and in three separate acts of creation He made the vegetable and animal kingdom, then He made man. I still believe in the Genesis story of Creation and you so called smart folks who have been trying to find the missing link between man and the animal kingdom, why don't you try and find the missing link between the animal and vegetable kingdom; it would be just as easy to find a half potato and a half possum as it would be to find a half man and a half monkey.

"The fact is if I was to believe in evolution at all, I would believe that monkeys came from those pseudo scientists and pin-headed professors who teach such bunk, rather than that they came from the monkey and that's pretty near blows the monkey up. Oh! you say, free thought; think all you have to but you have no right to get up in a pulpit or teach a Sunday School class supported by Christian fathers and mothers and try to destroy the faith of a Christian father and mother's boy in that father and mother's God. I'll go you one better: You have no right, in this Christian nation with tax supported schools, supported by Christian people, you have no right to try and destroy the faith of the Christian people's boys and girls. The anti-evolution law is a just law and ought to be enforced."

God made man and "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul," but man sinned and by his sin, brought sin and its curse upon all men, but thank God, 'In the fulness of time Christ Jesus our second Adam" came to deliver us from the curse of sin and to bring us back into our rightful relationship with God. We can live by faith in Jesus Christ forever or die

Cotton 8.54, Gain of $1.20 Per Bale

Steady Advance Friday on Third Week of Commodity Boom

July cotton made a new "high" Friday, closing at 8.54, an advance of 24 points or $1.20 a bale over the previous close.

The opening was strong, and a $1-a-bale advance was maintained most of the session, with the close steadily stronger.

This marks the close of the third consecutive week of rising cotton prices, since America's departure from the gold standard. The staple has risen from around 6 cents a pound to 8½.

Stocks Advance

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Despite heavy profit-taking, stocks closed mostly higher Friday in a turnover of about 5 million shares.

Extreme gains of $1 to more than $3 were reduced to a late wave of realizing. The list-ended generally strong after a moderate setback. Utilities and houses on the Bonseff river road were destroyed. A garage in front of Muir's store was moved from its foundation and it was necessary to place supports around it to prevent its falling across the highway.

Germany Asks Equality

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—Germany officially raised the question of her right to equality in armaments both in fact and under the terms of the world disarmament conference Friday.

The German delegate introduced amendments to the British disarmament plan, which would provide the equivalent to serving notice that unless military planes and submarines are abolished, Germany will want them.

U. S. Plan Progressing

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—American efforts to prepare the way for the London economic conference next month were redoubled Thursday night in the face of reports from abroad which accentuated the difficulties involved.

Undersecretary William Phillips of the State Department said France in accepting and made three reservations, reserving the right to raise its tariffs to meet depreciation of currencies, stipulating that the truce shall not apply to tariff measures now before its Parliament and stating that its consent was conditional on acceptance of the proposal by the principal powers.

British Acceptance Conditional

Later word that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in the House of Commons had announced Britain's conditional acceptance was received with some satisfaction at the State Department where the British "safeguards" were said to be similar to the French reservations.

Uncertainty abroad as to whether the dollar is to be depreciated was seen by officials here as having an apparent bearing on the desire of other countries to retain the power of raising their tariffs in event of such an occurence.

Italian support of the truce was looked for in the light of statements by Guido Jung, Mussolini's finance minister, who now is engaged in the international conversations here with the president and secretary of state. He emphasized his chief's desire for lowered trade barriers.

"Anti-Deficiency" Law of Arkansas Cuts Collateral

Land Bank Executive Says U. S. May Deal Arkansas "Out"

FUTRELL ALARMED

Abington's Bill Became Law Without Governor's Signature

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Futrell was informed Friday by Oliver J. Lloyd, vice-president and secretary of the Federal Land Bank, St. Louis, that Arkansas' anti-deficiency judgment act of the 1933 legislature would prevent this state from benefitting under the farm mortgage relief program of President Roosevelt.

The governor was "something else to have to be done" about the act, which became a law without his signature.

He indicated a test suit might be prosecuted to have it declared invalid.

Lloyd was quoted by the governor as saying that the federal government would not lend money on mortgages where the anti-deficiency act might operate because the government is not subject to the state's statutes.

The president's farm relief program contemplates the refinancing of farm mortgages at lower rates of interest for longer maturities.

The anti-deficiency act, introduced in the senate by Abington, of course provides that complainants in foreclosure suits must prosecute their complaints that they will not be for more amount of the mortgage plus interest and it instructs chancellors to render a sale in accordance with the appraisement fixed by the agents of the mortgagee.

Ragon Is Regarded Certain for Judge

Harvey Parnell May Be Given Clerkship of U. S. District Court

LITTLE ROCK.—Any doubt that Congressman Heartsill Ragon will be renominated and elected would be squashed, federal judge for the Western district of Arkansas apparently has been removed by recent developments in Washington, and potential candidates to succeed him have started work upon what to be systematic, though as yet quiet, campaigns.

It is expected that the Arkansas senators, Joe T. Robinson and Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, will join in a recommendation to President Roosevelt that the Fifth district congressman be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Frank A. Youmans of Fort Smith.

This will place Democrats on the federal bench in both districts of Arkansas, and apparently the Republicans are destined within the next few years to lose all the jobs they have held for many years.

If the appointment should be made before the meeting of the State Central Committee, May 13, it is probable that the committee will decide whether to arrange for nomination of a candidate for Congress by a convention or primary. Otherwise, the field may be left open for Democrats to run by filing nomination petitions, such as independent candidates file to get their names on the ballot.

An early appointment of Mr. Ragon as judge would make it possible to elect his successor July 18, when the prohibition referendum will be held, coincident with special elections for chief justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court and several district and county offices in which vacancies already exist or have been filled temporarily subject to the special elections.

It is expected that several other important federal positions in Arkansas will be given Democrats should the federal judge is named. There has been considerable speculating as to the probability of former Gov. Harvey Parnell being appointed collector of internal revenue.

Bundy and Ramsey Tell of Convention

Hope Men Recount Broadway of America Tour for Rotarians

Sid Bundy and W. M. Ramsey, who with Guy Bernett represented Hope at the Broadway of America convention early this week at El Paso, Texas, recounted their adventures to the Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

The cities along the route turned out with their fire departments to greet the caravan, Mr. Bundy said; and a fine hospitality was evidenced everywhere. The official delegate, federal judge for the Western district of Arkansas apparently has been remiss in his duties of encouragement to Washington, and potential candidates to succeed him have started work upon what to be systematic, though as yet quiet, campaigns.

It is expected that the Arkansas senators, Jo
